The "Ocean's" franchise ditches the glitz and glamor of Las Vegas for the hustle and bustle of the Big Apple with "Ocean's 8." The new sequel, which hits theaters this weekend, also features an A-list cast of fierce, female stars whose characters pull off quite the heist during the Met Gala. Find out what Sandra Bullock and company think of the new flick and discover where the production set up shop around New York. Read about it on pages 11-12 and at metro.us.

CITI BIKE PEDALS TO A RECORD 60 MILLION TRIPS

1 Less than two weeks after its fifth anniversary, Citi Bike has hit another major milestone: The popular bike-share has had 60 million rides since its 2013 launch. "As if breaking our daily ridership record twice last month wasn't enough, Citi Bike riders have pedaled into the record books once again," General Manager Kris Sandor said. "By reaching 60 million rides in only five years, Citi Bike has proven more successful than anyone could have ever imagined. The passion that New Yorkers have for the affordability, flexibility and fun that Citi Bike provides shows no signs of slowing down. We congratulate New York on this incredible milestone and are excited to continue pedaling on to new records." On May 9, Citi Bike broke its single-day ridership record with 78,421 trips and 140,804 miles pedaled. To put the 60 million trips into perspective, that means that Citi Bike riders have biked more than 105 million miles, which is greater than the distance between Earth and the sun, and burned nearly 4.5 billion calories — or more than 17 million plain bagels, the company said.

NASA ROVER SHOWS MARS HAS LIFE INGREDIENTS

2 A NASA rover has detected a bonanza of organic compounds on the surface of Mars and seasonal fluctuations of atmospheric methane in findings released on Thursday that mark some of the strongest evidence ever that Earth's neighbor may have harbored life. But National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists emphasized there could be nonbiological explanations for both discoveries made by the Curiosity rover at a site called Gale crater, leaving the issue of Martian life a tantalizing but unanswered question. Three different types of organic molecules were discovered when the rover dug just 2 inches into roughly 3.5 billion-year-old mudstone, a fine-grained sedimentary rock, at Gale crater, apparently the site of a large lake when ancient Mars was warmer and wetter than the desolate planet it is today. Curiosity also measured an unexpectedly large seasonal cycle in the low levels of atmospheric methane. About 95 percent of the methane in Earth's atmosphere is produced from biological activity, though the scientists said it is too soon to know if the Martian methane also is related to life.

3 Ben Fogle stands in front of a giant wave of plastic waste collected from Holywell beach by the U.K.'s Marine Conservation Society. The total weight of the heap, seen Thursday on Old Street in London, is 2,600 pounds and includes 10,000 pieces of plastic — representing the amount of marine plastic pollution found on the beach every 2 miles in the U.K. The public can contribute to the visual masterpiece by dropping off their own plastic waste at the site of the billboard.

UBER DRIVER CHARGED WITH MURDER IN DENVER

4 A Denver-area driver with the ride-sharing service Uber who police say fatally shot a passenger in his vehicle was charged on Thursday with first-degree murder, prosecutors said. Michael Andre Hancock, 29, who has been held without bond in the shooting death of Hyun Kim, 45, is charged with one count of murder after deliberation, the Denver District Attorney's Office said in a statement. Hancock's first court appearance to hear the charge has not been set, the prosecutor's office said, and it was unclear if he has retained or been appointed legal counsel. According to a Denver police probable cause affidavit, a motorist who came on the scene in the early morning hours of last Friday said Hancock told him he had shot Kim after the passenger attacked him. The case has renewed criticism of San Francisco-based Uber Technologies Inc., which is facing a class-action lawsuit over the company's vetting of its contract drivers. Uber said in a statement it was "deeply troubled" by the arrest of Hancock, who had worked for the service for almost three years, and that it was cooperating with Denver police.

TRUMP DANGLES PROSPECT OF KIM US VISIT

5 President Donald Trump on Thursday held out the prospect of inviting North Korean leader Kim Jong Un to the White House if he deemed next week's summit a success while also signaling he was willing to walk away if he thought talks did not go well. At a White House news conference with Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, Trump also repeated what he said last week that it was possible he and Kim could sign an agreement to end the 1950-53 Korean War, which was concluded only with a truce, not a peace treaty. "We could sign an agreement, as you know that would be a first step. ... We're looking at it, we're talking about it with a lot of other people," Trump told reporters. "That's probably the easy part. The hard part remains after that." Trump added that he hoped someday U.S. relations with Kim's secretive Pyongyang government could be normalized. The main issue for the June 12 summit in Singapore is the U.S. demand for North Korea to abandon a nuclear weapons program that now threatens the United States.

Renderings of NYPL's Melrose branch in the Bronx show that a third floor will be re-added to the 104-year-old library. MITCHELL GIURGOLA ARCHITECTS

Despite funding from city, repairs for aging libraries remain overdue

"The problem isn't gone, despite some really positive steps. They are helping people build skills to success, but they're doing so in buildings in various states of disrepair."

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

Even in today's digital world, New York City's three public library systems remain among the largest — and busiest — in the world.

"More people are using them than ever before, but doing it in different ways, not just to check out books," said Jonathan Bowles, executive director of the Center for an Urban Future.

Beyond books, the New York Public Library, Brooklyn Public Library and Queens Public Library systems offer New Yorkers a broad spectrum of programming from language, literacy, art and tech classes to internet access and more. But with operational expenses such as staff costs and with the average library's age 60 years or older, the systems face nearly $1 billion in critical infrastructure needs as patronage grows, CUF discovered in its latest library study, which was released Friday and compiled data from all three systems.

It follows up a 2014 report that brought infrastructure issues like broken boilers and leaky roofs to light and inspired Mayor Bill de Blasio and the city council to increase operational and capital support, reversing years of cuts and allowing libraries to extend hours.

"I want to give the city credit. We hope policymakers continue to take the steps they've already begun and understand we really appreciate what they've done," Bowles said, adding that CUF doesn't expect the city to write a $1 billion check, but reminds officials "that the problem isn't gone, despite some really positive steps. They are an incredibly important opportunity institution and helping people build skills to success, but they're doing so in buildings in various states of disrepair."

Modernizing NYC's historic libraries

"To best serve a public that relies on our libraries more than ever, it is critical that we not only modernize and repair our aging spaces, but also ensure that they are open for as many hours as possible," NYPL President Anthony W. Marx told Metro. "We look forward to continuing to work with the city to provide the necessary capital funding to upgrade our branches, improve the capital process and invest funding to ensure our doors are open."

"More people are using them than ever before, but doing it in different ways, not just to check out books."

Jonathan Bowles, executive director of the Center for an Urban Future

NYPL, which serves Manhattan, Bronx and Staten Island, is currently renovating five century-old branches and upgrading two others, including the Melrose branch in the Bronx, which is regaining a third floor after two of its original four floors were removed during renovations in 1959.

BPL is rebuilding or relocating four branches, adding two new ones and revamping several others.

"Our patrons need and deserve spaces that are welcoming and safe every day in every season," BPL President and CEO Linda E. Johnson said. "While we have made significant progress reducing BPL's unfunded needs with innovative library construction projects, there is much more to be done. Our ability to serve 8 million visitors every year is compromised by aging buildings."

QPL also completed several projects, including replacing the Elmhurst Library, and has significant capital projects including expansions, renovations and upgrades of interiors and infrastructures and a brand-new branch in Rego Park in the works thanks to city funding.

"The inclusion of library buildings in the City's 10-year capital plan and increased investment have made it possible for our systems to comprehensively address infrastructure upgrades that will provide inviting spaces that inspire learning and discovery," said QPL President and CEO Dennis M. Walcott. "Still, as the report makes clear, our libraries continue to face significant challenges that threaten our ability to meet our mission."

The Flushing branch of the Queens Public Library is one of the largest library systems in the country. ISTOCK

The Central Library of the Brooklyn Public Library system serves eight million New Yorkers each year. ISTOCK

All three library systems are asking the city for funding this budget season, though it's unclear what will happen — or how the city will respond to the CUF report, beyond the mayor's office telling Metro "we will be happy to review and consider the study. We'll decline comment beyond that."

The NYPL, BPL and QPL have asked patrons to send letters of support for more public funding to their elected officials via investinlibraries.org.

NY Senate passes bill that would correct spelling of Verrazano Bridge

Yup, the Verrazano Bridge actually contains a typo, since the namesake of the structure was Giovanni da Verrazzano — with two Zs.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

"Unfortunately, the name of this historic bridge has been spelled incorrectly for several decades and out of respect should be corrected immediately."

Senate bill

A change may be coming to the Verrazano bridge, but it's not one that would cause any construction delays.

The New York state Senate passed a bill that would correct the spelling of the suspension bridge that connects Staten Island and Brooklyn.

The Verrazano Bridge has actually been misspelled for more than 50 years, lawmakers say, since it opened in 1964. The Verrazano-Narrows Bridge was named for Italian explorer Giovanni da Verrazzano.

The Senate unanimously passed the bill on Wednesday and is currently awaiting approval in the Assembly, after which it will be delivered to Gov. Andrew Cuomo.

In correcting the spelling, the bill would require new signs for the bridge that feature that extra z.

This isn't the first time an effort has been taken up to correct the bridge's name. Similar bills were introduced in the last two legislative sessions. The typo gained more attention after Robert Nash, then a 21-year-old Brooklyn college student, started an online petition in 2016 in favor of the correct spelling of "Verrazzano."

Along with fixing all signs that mention the bridge, Nash suggested a statue should be built near the structure to honor its namesake.

The Verrazano Bridge is a notable structure: With a central span of 4,260 feet, it's the longest suspension bridge in the United States and the 13th longest in the world.

The Verrazano Bridge has been misspelled for more than 50 years, due to a simple clerical mistake. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

The bridge is the "gateway" to the New York City harbor, and its namesake, Giovanni de Verrazzano chartered those waters in 1524.

Verrazzano was an Italian explorer born around 1485, according to biography.com. King Francis I, of France, sent him to explore the East Coast of North America in search of a route to the Pacific Ocean. Though he first made landfall near what is now North Carolina, he headed north, eventually discovering the New York Harbor, according to Britannica, along with Block Island and Narragansett Bay. He was the first European to see and enter the New York Harbor.

The typo in the name "Verrazano Bridge" seems to stem from a simple clerical mistake. Though it's not clear how much correcting the signs would cost, that bill would be for the MTA to handle.

"Unfortunately, the name of this historic bridge has been spelled incorrectly for several decades and out of respect should be corrected immediately," the Senate bill reads, "especially considering there will be no cost to the state."

U.S. immigration authorities sending 1,600 detainees to federal prisons

Prison union leaders in California, Texas and Washingon admit they were given little time for preparation.

U.S. authorities are transferring into federal prisons about 1,600 Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) detainees, officials told Reuters on Thursday. It's the first large-scale use of federal prisons to hold detainees amid a Trump administration crackdown on people entering the country illegally.

An ICE spokeswoman told Reuters five federal prisons will temporarily take in detainees awaiting civil immigration court hearings, including potential asylum seekers, with one prison in Victorville, California, preparing to house 1,000 people.

Officials of a prison employees' union said the influx of ICE detainees raises questions about prison staffing and safety.

Union leaders at prisons in California, Texas and Washington state who spoke to Reuters said they had little time to prepare for the large intake of detainees.

At Victorville, the prison getting the largest number of people, workers are moving about 500 inmates in a medium-security facility to make space, said John Kostelnik, local president for the American Federation of Government Employees Council of Prison Locals union.

> "There is so much movement going on. Everyone is running around like a chicken without their head."
> John Kostelnik, local president for the American Federation of Government Employees Council of Prison Locals union

"There is so much movement going on," said Kostelnik. "Everyone is running around like a chicken without their head."

ICE spokeswoman Dani Bennett said, "U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement is working to meet the demand for additional immigration detention space, both long and short term" due to a surge in illegal border crossings and a U.S. Department of Justice zero-tolerance policy.

"To meet this need, ICE is collaborating with the U.S. Marshals Service (USMS), the Bureau of Prisons (BOP), private detention facility operators and local government agencies," she said in a statement to Reuters. REUTERS

Indianapolis' CrossFit Infiltrate is now closed after canceling an Indy Pride event. GODONG/UIG VIA GETTY IMAGES

CrossFit cans spokesman who called LBGTQ Pride celebration a 'sin'

CrossFit executive Russell Berger is looking for a new job after a series of tweets compared a LGBTQ Pride workout to a sin.

"As someone who personally believes celebrating 'pride' is a sin, I'd like to personally encourage #CrossFitInfiltrate for standing by their convictions and refusing to host an @indypride workout," Berger wrote in a series of now-deleted tweets.

The former chief knowledge officer was referring to an event at an Indianapolis, Indiana, CrossFit gym. The event — organized by the gym's trainers — was meant to celebrate LGBTQ Pride month and the Indy Pride celebration set for this weekend.

The owners of CrossFit Infiltrate ordered the organizing trainers to cancel the event, leading to a revolt among members. Undeterred, the owners doubled down on the cancellation, saying that they're about "humility" and not "pride."

"Total health involves the body, the emotions, relationships, and the spirit. At the foundational detractor from health, as we believe God sets the parameters for, is pride. We believe that true health forever can only be found within humility, not pride. Humility is seeing oneself as they truly are, and as God truly defines them to be. As a business we will choose to deploy our resources towards those efforts and causes that line up with our own values and beliefs."

> "It became way too difficult to discern between me making statements of personal opinion, and me speaking as a voice for CrossFit."
> Former CrossFit executive Russell Berger

Soon after, CrossFit placed Berger on leave, then terminated him hours later.

"He needs to take a big dose of 'shut the f— up' and hide out for awhile. It's sad," CrossFit founder and CEO Greg Glassman told BuzzFeed. "We do so much good work with such pure hearts — to have some zealot in his off time do something this stupid, we're all upset. The whole company is upset."

Berger, a pastor in Alabama, later apologized for his tweets that made it seem like he was speaking on behalf of the company. "It became way too difficult to discern between me making statements of personal opinion, and me speaking as a voice for CrossFit," he told BuzzFeed.

"I should have realized that, and I didn't until it was too late," he said, adding that he still believes in his "actual point."

CrossFit Infiltrate, the gym at the center of the controversy, is now permanently closed.

All right, people — here are our last Grumbles of the week. I'd say we are going into the weekend with some of our best ones yet. Remember to keep sending them in and we'll publish them. This is your time at the microphone!

WOMEN MAKING A MESS IN THE BATHROOMS AT WORK!
I want to grumble about the women at work who leave tendrils of hair in the sink. EEUUWW. Wash it down or wipe it up with a paper towel. And while I'm grumbling about bathroom etiquette, let's also mention the ladies who leave tinkles on the seat. Again, wipe it up! This behavior is obviously an extension of their at-home messiness.
- Allison Forde,
Metro US reader

TOO MUCH PERFUME ON PUBLIC TRANSIT!
Who says "Let me douse myself in horrid perfume right before I get on public transit"? The lady next to me on the train, that's who. Nose burning, eyes watering, headache-forming type of stank. I should have asked her where she got such a God-awful scent so I can get some to use as chemical warfare. But I kept my mouth shut, which wasn't easy because I was trying not to breath through my nose.
- Robin Wagner, Metro Philly reader and commuter

STOP TAKING UP TABLES WHEN YOU DON'T DESERVE THEM!
Please don't sit at a table when a bench will do! My husband & I meet for lunch almost every day and love to enjoy our food in one of the beautiful parks in Center City. BUT there are too many ignorant people reading books, looking at their phones or just taking in the sites at a TABLE when a chair, a wall, the grass or a bench would suffice! I would like to eat my sandwich or salad or soup or whatever at a table like a civilized human! Please be aware that others only get an hour to enjoy the great outdoors and eat their lunch.

Aries Keep busy. A physical challenge will help you blow off steam and keep you from doing or saying something you shouldn't. Bide your time and gather information.

Taurus Resolve uncertainty and move forward with enthusiasm. Personal gains can be made if you are willing to put in the time and effort. Romance is on the rise.

Gemini You'll be faced with mixed emotions that are bound to make you think twice when it comes to how much you do for others. Listen to what's being asked for, but only offer what's fair.

Cancer Emotional problems will surface when dealing with decisions that include other people. Partnerships must be handled with care to avoid a misunderstanding.

Leo A short trip will do you good and will encourage you to make a decision that you've been contemplating. If you are uncertain, ask someone you trust to offer suggestions.

Virgo Keep plugging away at whatever it is you must accomplish. Hard work will pay off, and the time it takes to apply extra detail will not be wasted. Follow your instincts.

Libra Channel your energy into home and personal improvements. Gather information to ensure that you have answers ready for anyone who offers criticism or derogatory remarks.

Scorpio Look at the big picture, but don't buy into something you cannot afford. Set your sights on what's realistic and doable. A personal improvement or romantic encounter looks inviting.

Sagittarius Discuss your intentions with someone who will be influenced by the decisions you make. Getting the go-ahead will make your plans easier to achieve. Home improvement is favored.

Capricorn Listen carefully and look for a way to deal with friends and relatives without upsetting someone you care about. Don't make changes without getting approval first.

Aquarius Clear the air. If you want someone to do something, you have to be blunt about what you want. Find out where you stand, and do what's necessary.

Pisces Not everyone will see things the same way you do. Take a wait-and-see approach when dealing with matters that can influence your reputation or affect your position. EUGENIA LAST

‘Ocean’s 8’: A fun flick with attitude, comedy and style

BARRY WETCHER/WARNER BROS.

Sandra Bullock, Cate Blanchett and Anne Hathaway open up about the female-led sequel.

DIEGO RAMMSY
MWN
letters@metro.us

At first glance, “Oceans’ 8,” a film from the franchise that director Steven Soderbergh made popular with the “Ocean’s Eleven” trilogy, seemed nothing more than a female version of the original.

“When they told me the idea for the first time, I honestly did not know if it would work, I thought it was fun but I did not think it would be feasible,” admits Sandra Bullock at the film’s opening.

“Ocean’s 8” brings together a team of female talents so strong and diverse that it turns what would be a standard action movie into a crime comedy with as many nuances as its expressive characters allow.

After spending five years, eight months and 12 days inside her cell planning what could be her final hit, Debbie (Bullock), sister of George Clooney’s Danny Ocean, brings together a gang to steal a $150 million diamond necklace during the annual Met Gala in New York.

“But what this movie really is about is these eight wonderfully complex, intelligent and funny women, who will take you on their own journey and in all the twists and turns that will come,” explains Bullock at the same Met, the place conveniently chosen for part of the cast to talk about the premiere.

Cate Blanchett plays Lou, a rebellious, determined and tough woman who’s Debbie’s right hand in this difficult mission.

“Once I found out who the other women were going to be and knowing the franchise we were going to be a part of, I felt it would be a fun and great thing to do, and it’s a risk but it was worth it,” Blanchett acknowledges.

The rest of the gang is made up by fashion designer Rose Weil (Helena Bonham Carter), celebrity Daphne Kluger (Anne Hathaway), expert jeweler Amita (Mindy Kaling), housewife Tammy (Sarah Paulson), hacker Nine Ball (Rihanna) and pickpocket Constance (Awkwafina).

Far from conventional

The film has a very prominent cast, which could only have happened thanks to a story that escapes conventional standards and digs into very defined characters.

“We had a director [Gary Ross] who really loves women and who proposed a story in which they could do their thing, which is fantastic,” adds Blanchett, because, this film has its own identity with complex characters.

“We cannot underestimate the power of visual representation and it is not that we are telling an 8-year-old girl to become a criminal, but that she can do what she really wants to do and that there is space for everyone,” says Anne Hathaway.

According to Bullock, much of the result is due to the chemistry that the cast achieved.

“We had the opportunity to connect and share,” Bullock says. “We worked long hours, but once we lowered our guard and realized that we were among friends, we were able to connect with each other, because you usually do not have the opportunity to work with a group of women in a movie.”

Broadway's biggest trends

Ahead of Sunday's 72nd Tony Awards, we look at the state of Broadway and where theater is headed.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

"Mean Girls" tied with "SpongeBob SquarePants" as the most-nominated show at the Tonys. JOAN MARCUS

After a wildly diverse 2016-17 season, Broadway has gone hard on nostalgia and escapism for its current season. Expect a lighter mood to the 72nd annual Tony Awards, which will be hosted at Radio City Music Hall on June 10, airing live on CBS starting at 8 p.m.

Before the lights come up, here's a look at some of the biggest trends on Broadway and how they're shaping the theater scene — and what the future may hold.

Broadway is getting younger

We wondered in 2016 whether "Hamilton" would bring more young people to Broadway — and the answer is a resounding yes. With high school drama "Dear Evan Hansen" continuing to be one of the top-grossing shows, Broadway doubled down with Tina Fey's musical version of "Mean Girls". The nominees also have some very fresh faces, among them Hailey Kilgore, making her debut at just 18 years old as the lead in "Once on This Island", and 26-year-old Ethan Slater as SpongeBob.

Adaptations get some respect

Putting a beloved film on the stage has met with some decidedly mixed results on Broadway. For every "Legally Blonde", there's a "Rocky".

This year's most nominated shows, however, are both adaptations: "Mean Girls" and "SpongeBob SquarePants" with 12 each. They're proof that when a musical builds on the plot and themes of a show, audiences can be convinced to experience an old favorite in a new way.

A new era for plays

There's been much handwringing about more tourists leading Broadway theaters to commission more musicals than plays, possibly leading to a generation of lost talent. But four of this year's most nominated shows prove there's plenty of bank to be made without singing if you get creative. Tony Kushner's lauded revival of "Angels in America" became the most nominated play ever with 11. Among the 10 nominations for "Harry Potter and the Cursed Child" is an unusual nod for choreography. Staging the production by candlelight added an immersive element to "Farinelli and the King", while "The Play That Goes Wrong" proves comedy is still a strong draw.

A new kind of talent is seeking the spotlight

The trend of pop stars trying their hand at Broadway soundtracks started by "Kinky Boots" (Cyndi Lauper) and "Waitress" (Sara Bareilles) — and less notably "The Last Ship" (Sting) — added two new entries: Imogen Heap, who has already won a Drama Desk award for her music in "Harry Potter", and "SpongeBob", which outsourced almost its entire soundtrack to pop and rock performers like John Legend and Aerosmith's Steven Tyler. If "Let It Go" can own the Billboard charts, why wouldn't pop stars try their hand at musicals?

Could this be the end of the jukebox musical era?

The success of "The Jersey Boys" has spawned many mostly less successful jukebox musicals about famous singers' lives, but this season might be the one to end the trend. The Jimmy Buffet-endorsed "Escape to Margaritaville" didn't get a single nod and will close July 1 (though it is set to go on tour), while the Donna Summer musical only scooped up two nods for its leading ladies.

Mets could send deGrom, Syndergaard out of town

Things are going horribly wrong for the Mets, which could lead them to trade their two best pitchers.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Noah Syndergaard (left) and Jacob deGrom (right) could be used as trade trips by the Mets in order to usher in yet another rebuild as the franchise continues to struggle. GETTY IMAGES

If the losing continues, the New York Mets could very well trade star pitchers Jacob deGrom and Noah Syndergaard this season, per reports on Thursday.

The 11-1 start by the Mets this season seems as though it happened eons ago as the team has quickly plummeted down the standings toward ineptness. Since Apr. 14, Mickey Callaway's side is 16-31 and most recently were swept by the Baltimore Orioles, the worst team in the majors, in a two-game series.

New York has lost 11 of its last 13 games and the offense has been putrid as of late, scoring just two runs in the past 42 innings.

It's made the Mets a laughing stock around baseball once again as the big-market club run like a minor-league franchise is once again facing the harsh reality of mediocrity for yet another season. Granted, this is nothing new for a franchise that has made the postseason nine times since its inception in 1962.

However, it is a sudden fall from grace given that this team was the National League representatives in the 2015 World Series. With a rotation seemingly filled to the brim with young talent, it looked as though the Mets would be contenders for at least three-to-five years.

Instead, a combination of poor management and injuries have set the Mets back to the dark ages with the dreaded possibility of rebuilding starting to become a legitimate option. That means selling off their best players like Syndergaard and deGrom.

Mets officials have told Joel Sherman of the New York Post that "they would be crazy not to be open for business if their season continues to plummet."

That includes the possibility of helping the cross-town rival Yankees get even better as deGrom has been linked with a move to the Bronx.

DeGrom is in the midst of a Cy Young-worthy start to the 2018 season as he leads the National League with a 1.49 ERA while allowing just three runs over his last 50.1 innings of work. Yet, the 29-year-old is just 4-0 on the season due to an anemic offense and inept bullpen.

Syndergaard is set to return from a strained right index finger which delayed what has become a successful return from a torn pectoral muscle that robbed him of a majority of the 2017 season. He's 4-1 with a 3.06 ERA while his fastball continues to hover near the 100 mph mark.

If the Mets were keen on ushering in a culture change, dealing one of these arms would do it. The returns either deGrom or Syndergaard would yield are expected to be sky high, whether it's an established star or numerous premier prospects.

DeGrom will face Masahiro Tanaka on Friday night in the Mets' series opener against the Yankees while Syndergaard meets Luis Severino on Sunday night for a marquee matchup.

Who might spoil Justify's Triple Crown party?

Justify goes for a historic Triple Crown in Saturday's Belmont Stakes.

ROBERT CRISCOLA
sports@metro.us

Justify's march toward immortality continues on Saturday when he'll try to join Seattle Slew as the only undefeated Triple Crown winner in history by taking the Belmont Stakes (6:30 p.m., NBC). The Bob Baffert trainee made it look easy in the Kentucky Derby, but he showed some signs of fatigue in the Preakness, winning by a diminishing half-length while seeing a speed figure decrease. Jockey Mike Smith will have to ensure his mount has enough left in the tank, but he seems confident heading into the 1 1/2-mile "Test of the Champion."

"He acts like he should [handle it]," Smith said in a Santa Anita press release. "His energy level is good, it's high, he's galloping out very well from his last two races. I don't see why he wouldn't handle it."

Justify, breaking from post one as the 4-5 favorite on the morning-line, will face nine rivals in the Belmont Stakes; here are the top three contenders with an upset chance.

Justify will be looking to become just the second undefeated horse to win a Triple Crown on Saturday. GETTY IMAGES

HOFBURG (9-2) didn't get the cleanest trip in "the Run for the Roses," steadying twice on the far turn, but he managed to pick off some foes in the stretch while finishing seventh. His pedigree cries out for this distance as he's by Tapit, sire of three of the last four Belmont Stakes winners, out of a mare by Touch Gold, who won this race in 1997. Hofburg hinted at serious ability in the Florida Derby when he ran second to Audible, who grabbed third in the Kentucky Derby but decided to bypass this race. Hofburg makes just his fifth career start, so there's still room for improvement as well. Bill Mott, who won the Belmont in 2010 with Drosselmeyer, keeps Irad Ortiz Jr, who won the 2016 Belmont with Creator, in the saddle.

BRAVAZO (8-1) is the only other colt that will participate in all three legs of the Triple Crown aside from Justify. He was 66-1 in the Derby but outran those odds when placing sixth despite a very wide trip. On an equally muddy track at Pimlico, Bravazo was a close second in the Preakness. However, if there's no significant rainfall in New York on Saturday, it's possible he could take a step back. Bravazo's pedigree doesn't preclude him from getting the distance, as he's by 1998 Breeders' Cup Classic winner Awesome Again out of a Cee's Tizzy (sire of 2000 and 2001 Breeders' Cup Classic winner Tiznow) mare. Four-time Belmont-winning trainer D. Wayne Lukas names Luis Saez, who's having a career year by earnings per start ($13,121), to ride.

BLENDED CITIZEN (15-1) didn't have the credentials to make the Kentucky Derby, but he showed an affinity for this course when taking the 1 1/8-mile Peter Pan Stakes on May 12. However, his ability to get the Belmont distance is less obvious when compared to his competition. His sire, Proud Citizen, was a distant fifth in the 2002 Belmont. Both trainer (Doug O'Neill) and jockey (Kyle Frey) are after their first Belmont triumph.
